THE WILEY TRADITION . . .

the cheers subside.
and as we climb the ladder
it is not only a number that we paint upon the smokestack.
there is something more to this than the red bricks of spirit and symbol that constitute our image . . .
the many feet
quickly bending the grassblades
and the laughing taunts
at the gray smoked sky
with the names
and the special individual symbols etched sharply into the old wood.
it is not the answers
that we and they have learned here
not the names of the leaves
or the width of the beams
that have stood for a century;
only the quests
and the ever tantalizing questions
the flights to the sun with seeking wings of wax echoing through the branches of the straight tall trees
even when the walls are torn down.

. . . and, it is to this—the noble and enduring TRADITION of WILEY HIGH SCHOOL that we dedicate the 1966 WILEYAN.

THE WILEY ACADEMIC TRADITION . . .

The hands hold the diplomas. Behind the old brick walls of Wiley High, we have spent many hours writing papers and tests on the scratched wood of the well-used desks. Now it is over. But it is something more than a certificate of graduation that we carry away with us. The academic TRADITION of WILEY is something more profound than a piece of paper covered with dignified lettering and fond memories.

For three years, we have mastered the facts and the numbers, the dates and the theories. We have scribbled homework assignments long into the night and filled in the blanks on countless mimeographed test sheets. When we leave the security of these halls, we will be fully prepared to take our place in society. For behind the grades and the formulas, we have sensed the basic spirit of learning—the ever-changing search for the never final answers.

Although Wiley's building was constructed long ago, the academic TRADITION of WILEY is not ancient and static. It is modern and growing. And in this complex world with millions of starving people and powerful atomic weapons the ideas of reason, logic, and tolerance that we have gained here will help give us the courage to work for a better world for all. Looking down at the precious diplomas in our hands, we know that Wiley High School will continue to perform this vital job of education for another hundred years, whether it is within a building of old brick and wooden frames or of glass and steel walls.

EAGER STUDENTS PLUS ABLE TEACHERS EQUAL ACADEMIC EXCELLENCE

WILEY'S EXTRACURRICULAR TRADITION . . .

"Yell for the red! Yell for the white!
Yell for the team that's gonna win tonight!"

"The basic idea is that the $$\text{rth term} = \frac{n(n-1)(n-2)\ \ldots\ (n-r+2)}{(r-1)!}\, x^{n-r+1} y^{r-1}"$$

Spirited cheers around a homecoming bonfire, the tears in the eyes of the football queen, and an erudite explanation of the binomial formula in Math Club added vital dimensions to our Wiley experience. As we hurried from meeting to meeting, the intensity and variety of our activities never diminished. Sharing and working together not only increased our knowledge, but led us to a greater understanding of the meaning of brotherhood.

These things, too, are part of the WILEY TRADITION. The underlying spirit of our school is not something dull and purely academic. It is a living, vibrant enthusiasm—reflected in the eagerness of our political arguments, in our well-marked pages of publication copy, and in the faces of the seniors, yelling for Wiley in their loudest voices for the last and final time.

THE WILEY ATHLETIC TRADITION . . .

"And the final score is:
Wiley—44
Linton— 2

"Happy birthday Coach Martin, Happy 44th birthday to you!"

From the magic "44" of the victorious football team to the hole-in-one on the golf green, our athletes have lived up to the WILEY TRADITION of excellence and achievement. Realizing the sweat and disciplined work that underlie each glamorous victory, all of Wiley has shown great honor and respect to the members of her teams. More important than the exciting victories of our sportsmen have been their qualities of fair play, teamwork, and cooperation that are part of Wiley's ideals. The winning basket of that "cliff-hanger" joined together not only the members of the basketball team, but also the entire student body of Wiley High School. This year, more than ever, our sports created a wealth of shared joys and sorrows that carried the old school spirit to new heights of enthusiasm.

The study of mathematics serves as an excellent source of mental discipline and offers an effective preparation for technological vocations. The mathematics department anticipated the need for rigorous study of this nature and provided an array of courses. This varied mathematics curriculum offered an opportunity for a large portion of the student body to increase their knowledge in the science of numbers.

SCIENCE UNLOCKS DOOR TO PROGRESS

In the days of nuclear energy and space exploration, it is increasingly important that students comprehend the intricacies of the universe so they may deal with the known world and understand life on other planets. Toward this goal the Science Department presents a wide variety of courses, each designed to offer the student a fundamental knowledge of the subject. The department realizes the need of the students to know the properties of nature and provides opportunities for observations of the scientific phenomena in the laboratory.

SOCIAL STUDIES INSPECTS WORLD

A spirit of free inquiry and the honest expression of opinion prevailed in Wiley's social studies classes. Many facets of world and domestic problems were pursued through lectures and discussions. It is hoped that the understanding of brotherhood and democracy gained here will have a positive impact on the world outside.

PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

"Through more than 100 years of history of community service, Wiley has always stood for the highest goals of academic achievement, pupil development and athletic success. She is recognized throughout the state as one of the oldest and most outstanding high schools. This has not just happened, but has been achieved by strong administration, dedicated faculty, and a superior student body.

In the not too distant future, Wiley, as an entity, may cease to exist. Any institution which has meant so much to so many will live on, perhaps more influentially, as it exists as an ideal and a memory to those who have had a part in its reality.

With the increased demands which are being placed on secondary education by institutions of higher learning, the job market, and an informed citizenry, Wiley looks to the future and hopes to meet this challenge. These are some of the goals for which we are striving at Wiley during her twilight years."

HOMECOMING ILLUMINATES THE WILEY TRADITION

The contagious excitement of Homecoming was reflected in the faces of the students standing around the bonfire, built by the Hi-Y members. As the newly-appointed sponsor of the school newspaper, Mrs. Kaliden has revised the technique of production. The most effective transition has been that of the duplicated to the offset newspaper. This printing procedure requires additional work, but is comparable in appearance to the letterpress paper.

The sponsor and co-editors supervised the production and management of the newspaper. The staff consists of three divisions. The production staff prepares the paper for the printer; the editorial department assembles all editorial material; the business staff handles circulation, advertising, and accounting.

Each reporter on the newspaper is assigned a "news beat", which is adapted to his personality and which serves as the source of news material.

Top right: Ann Mitchell found that new equipment facilitated production.

Listen dear students, and you shall laugh
At the midnight ride of the Wileyan staff.
To Zwerner's, to Crandell's, to Kaliden's afar,
Charges Phil in his trusty white car.
Look out Mrs. Kaliden; here we come.
We've so much left we'll never be done.
With pictures to crop to the right size
("Where's that sheet?" "Open your eyes!")
And copy to check and heads to write,
We may be here the rest of the night.
Twelve o'clock; we've finished our task
Ready to mail and ship at last.
Today, not tomorrow, must be the postmark down.
Step on the gas! Speed into town!
Please, Mr. Postman, put today's postmark
there.
If you do this, we'll be out of your hair.
Hurray! Hurray! Success this time!
Pray! Be more organized for the next deadline!

The yell leaders are selected annually by a board of school counselors and deans, faculty members, and leading members of the student body. Contestants are judged on general appearance, ability, and enthusiasm. Prospective yell leaders must also maintain a high scholastic average and conduct themselves in the proper Wiley manner.

During the summer Wiley cheerleaders, with others from the surrounding states, attended a camp in Michigan for special training. After their return, the yell leaders felt that they had gained much, despite their dislike for the "sweat pits and Gargantuan mosquitoes."
